

I am not sure whose idea this was to diminish the protection the state of Indiana provides to us when it comes to telemarketers, but I can guess. I know the business and telemarketing lobbies are trying their hardest to convince our politicians that this law should be changed, but our representatives better be fighting for our rights to enjoy the piece it has been since the calls have stopped. I just recently moved to this state about 18 months ago and since my phone was installed the calls just started coming. Every night of the week during my dinner hour the calls would come and on the weekend I was awoken to answer some machine that was trying to sell me new windows; I own a new condo and it doesn't need new windows!!. If I bought everything the telemarketing companies wanted to sell me I could have built a second home by now. On October 1st of this year my number was activated as a NO call house and since then it has been very peaceful. I do not want these calls to startup again because some company thinks they have the right to call "MY HOUSE" when it's my phone and I do NOT want them disturbing me.

I have been a registered republican and voted for the President in the last presidential election. I voted republican in the last election but if this law should change and make it easier for the telemarketers to call, I will convince my family, my brothers and their family, my future grand children, and everyone else I now to vote democratic.
